

News for the Pews

Matachia is now enjoying her Harvest of Blessings! Growing up in a large family and a Pentecostal church, Matachia has fond memories of her mother, "Mom always talked about the importance of being humble." In 2000, Matachia lost her mom. Two years later she lost her home and endured a short, abusive marriage. She soon found herself homeless.

"My biggest supporters through everything have been my children. God has always brought the right people into my life at the right time." Surviving bad relationships, abuse, and losing everything she owned, Matachia found herself at Good Samaritan. "My disobedience got me here, but my obedience (to God) got me out," Matachia humbly shares. She now is in her own apartment and working a job as an in-home care giver, a job she loves. "All the women at GSRM are beautiful. They all helped me. I love them so much. God never allowed me to sleep on the ground. He always provided a roof over my head. I'm so grateful, happy and content."
